Mr. Mouse

by : Sarah Boline

The year was 1890. Mr. Mouse was walking through the streets of London, England.

Mr. Mouse was enjoying a piece of cheese when he found something interesting.
It was pictures of fancy men's clothes!

He thought, "Since I'm a mouse,
I will never be able to dress like them.
No mouse wears clothes."

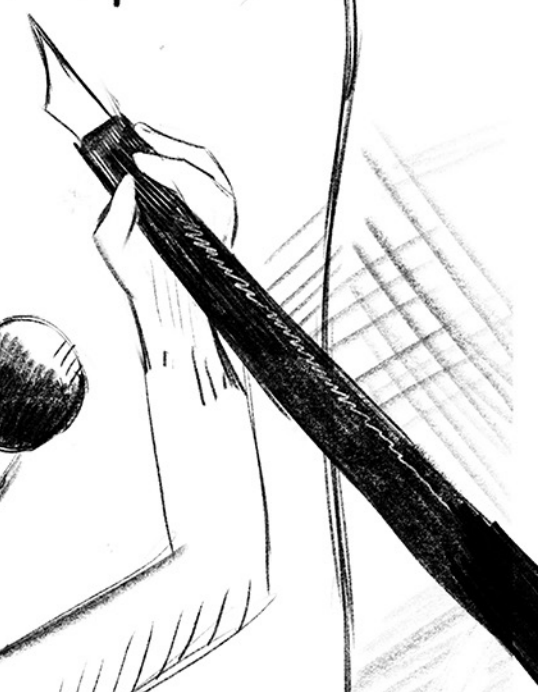

"I don't care what the other mice think!
I can steal bits of clothing,
and make my own fancy outfit!"

He sketched his dream outfit.
He thought it was PERFECT.

Sir Resinton was painting
when Mr. mouse took a piece of his collared shirt.

Miss Adelaide Vim was writing her new novel when
Mr. Mouse stole a piece of her polka-dot necktie.

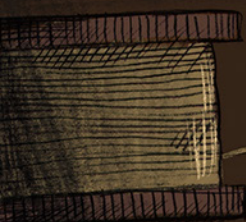

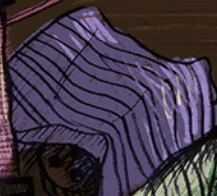

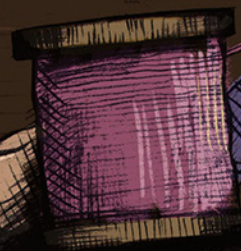

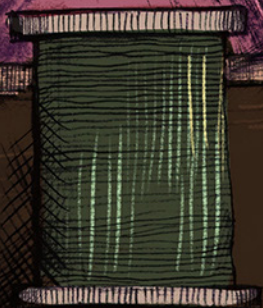

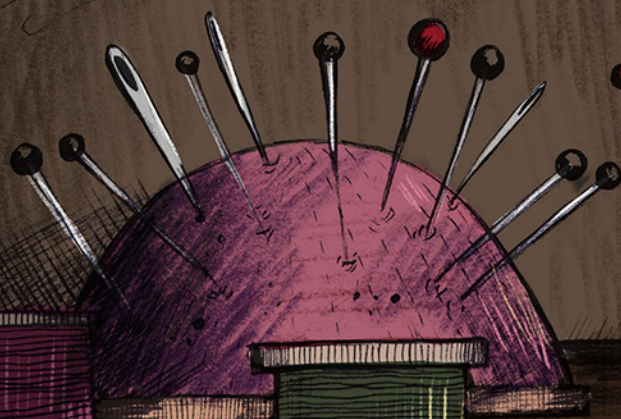

Bryon Price was reading Frankenstein
when Mr. Mouse stole a piece of his overcoat.

He worked on his outfit all night.

I feel
FANCY!

Time to show people
my new outfit!

He strolled through town,
but people did not like his new outfit and that he was a mouse.

Mr. Mouse thought stealing some cheese from the restaurant would make him feel better.

The neighbors noticed Mr. Mouse's outfit and that he had ruined their clothes.
My overcoat! My necktie! My top-hat!

As the neighbors were sleeping that night, he repaired all their clothes.
He hoped that they would be happy and forgive him.

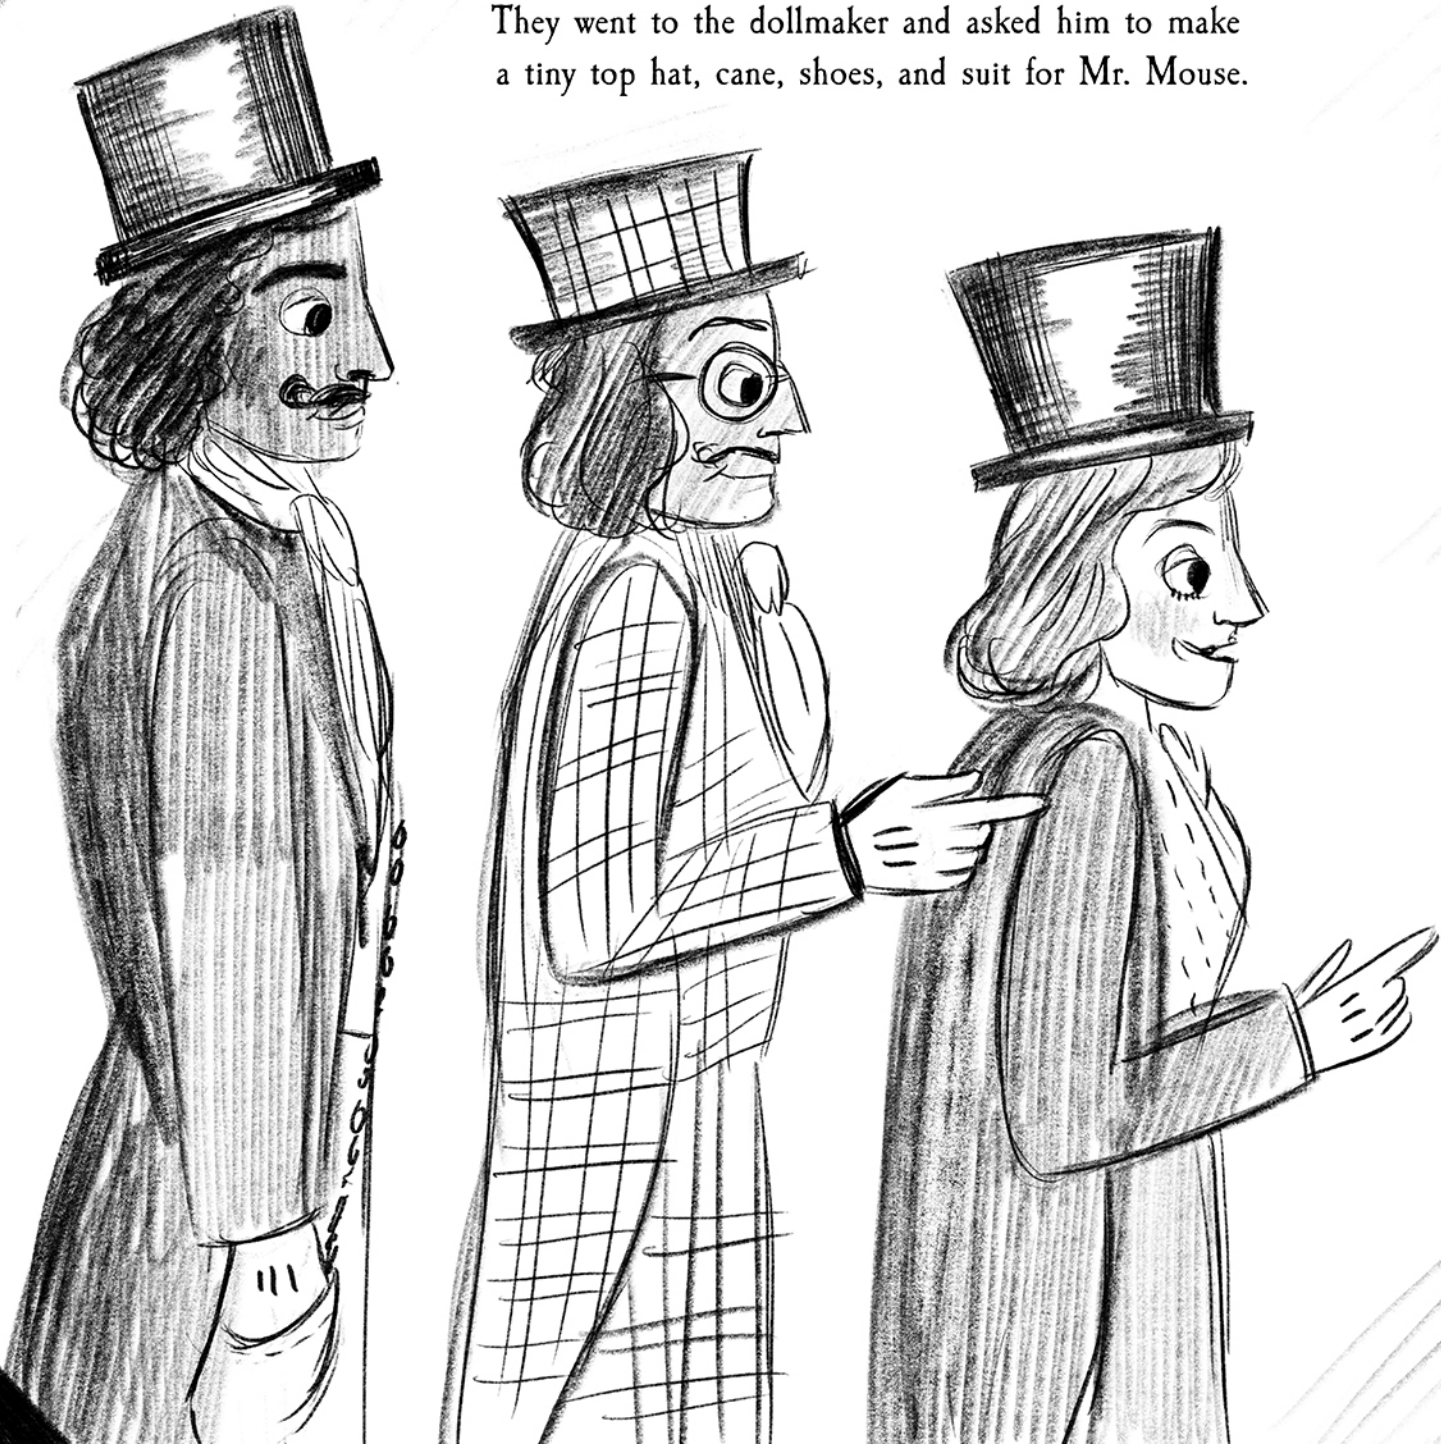

After fixing their clothes,
he felt very sleepy but also very content.

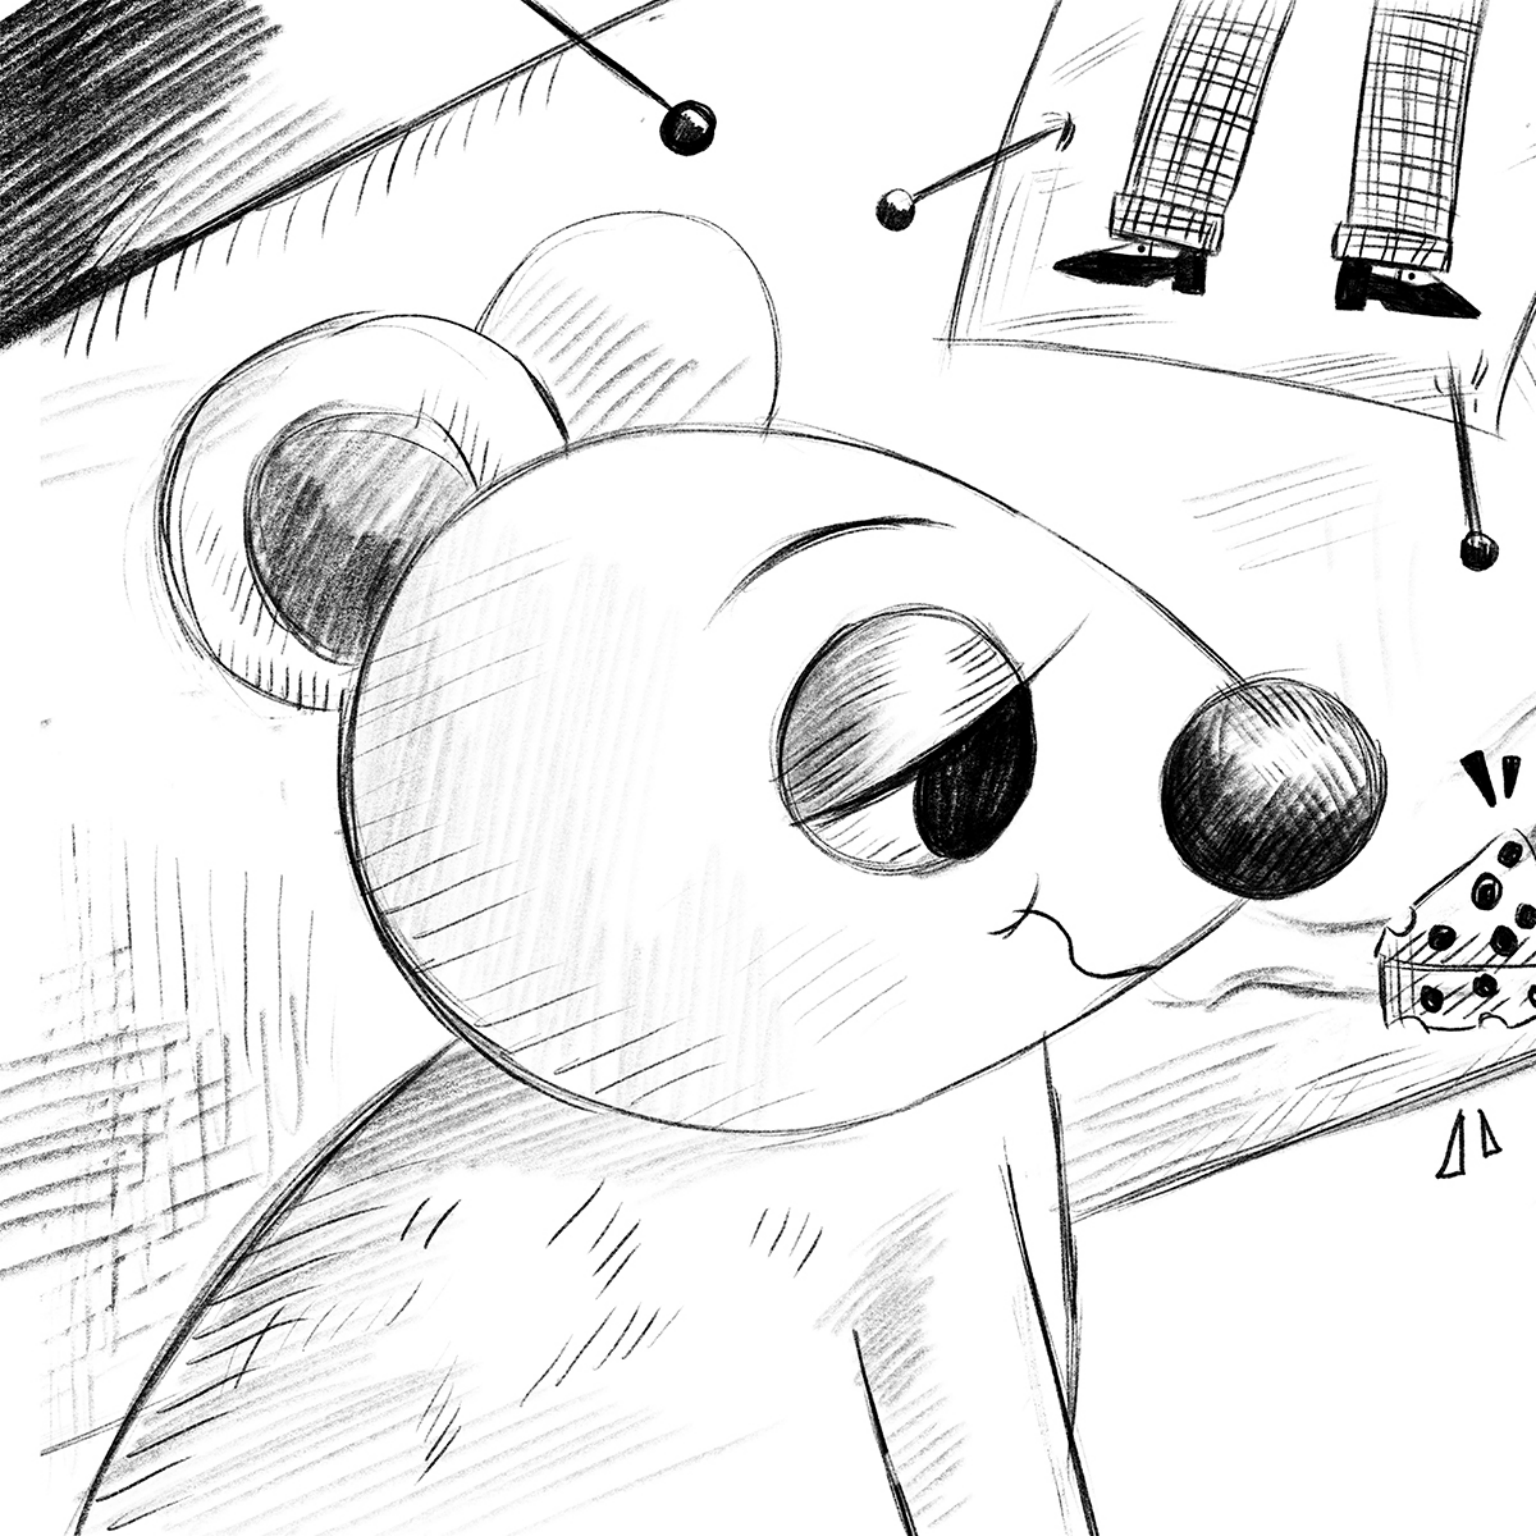

In the morning, the neighbors were getting ready for the day,
and they noticed that their clothes were fixed!

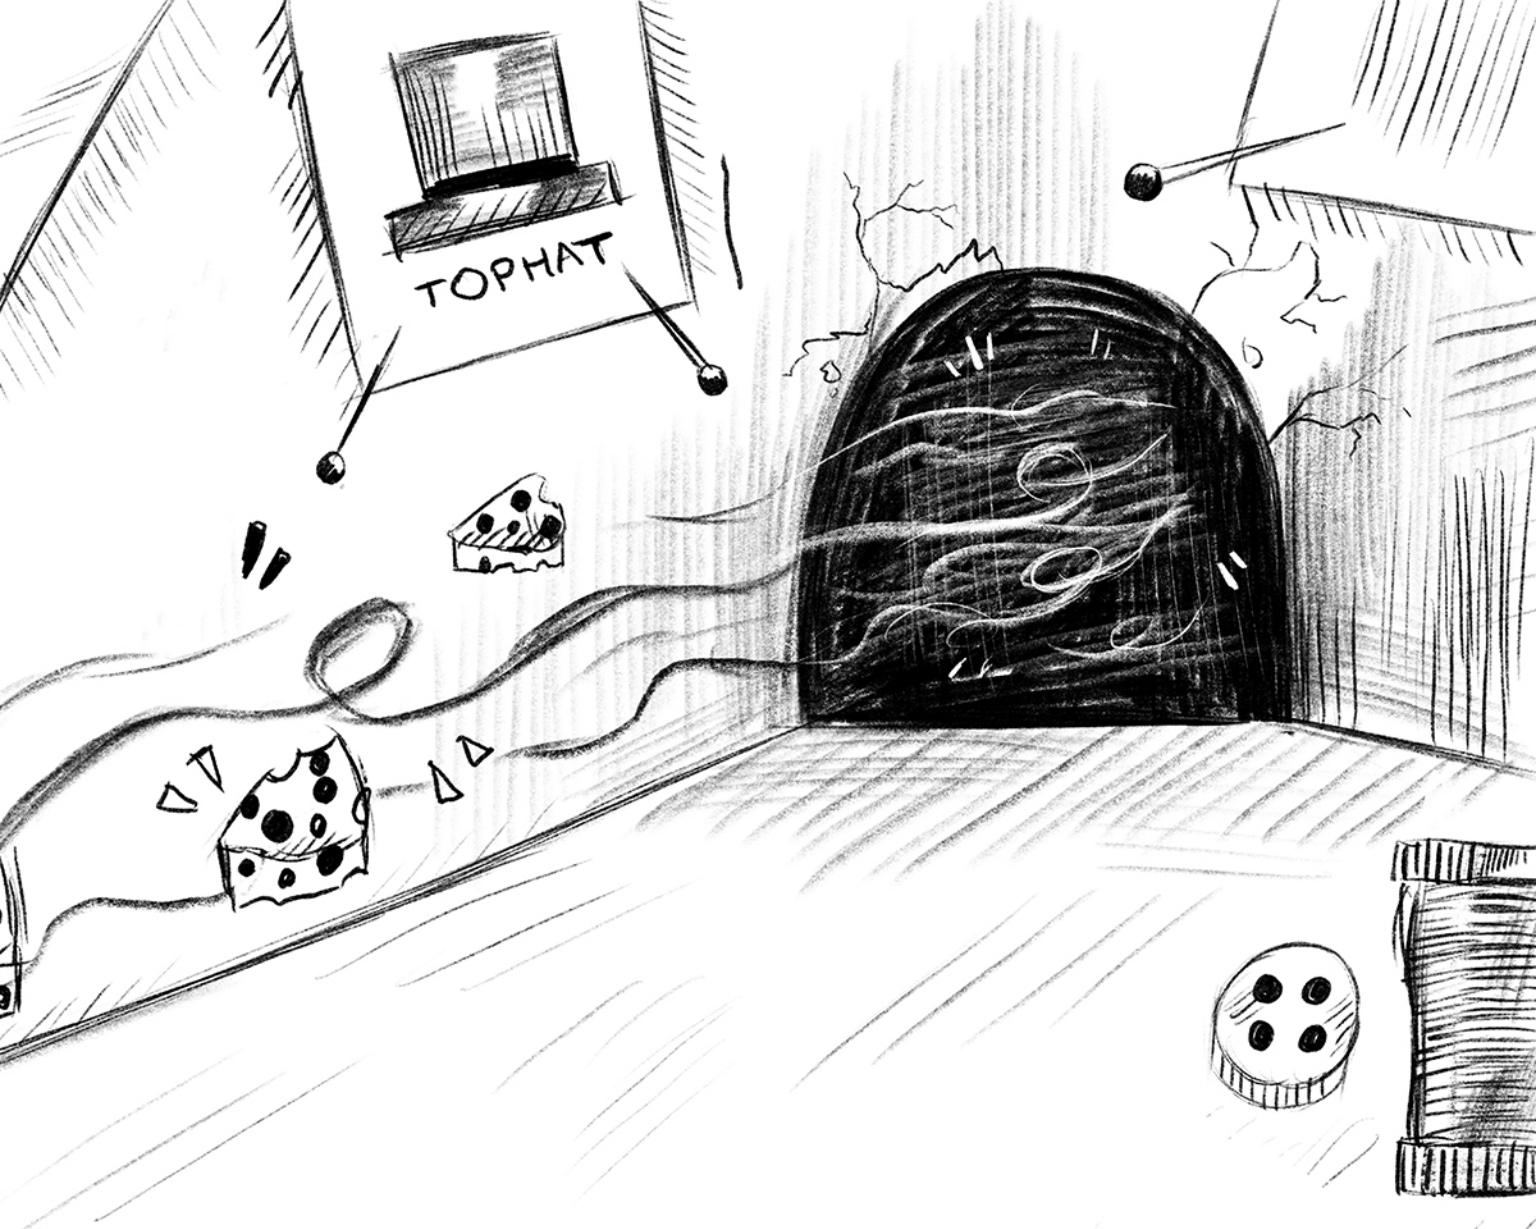

They went to the dollmaker and asked him to make a tiny top hat, cane, shoes, and suit for Mr. Mouse.

DOLL MAKER

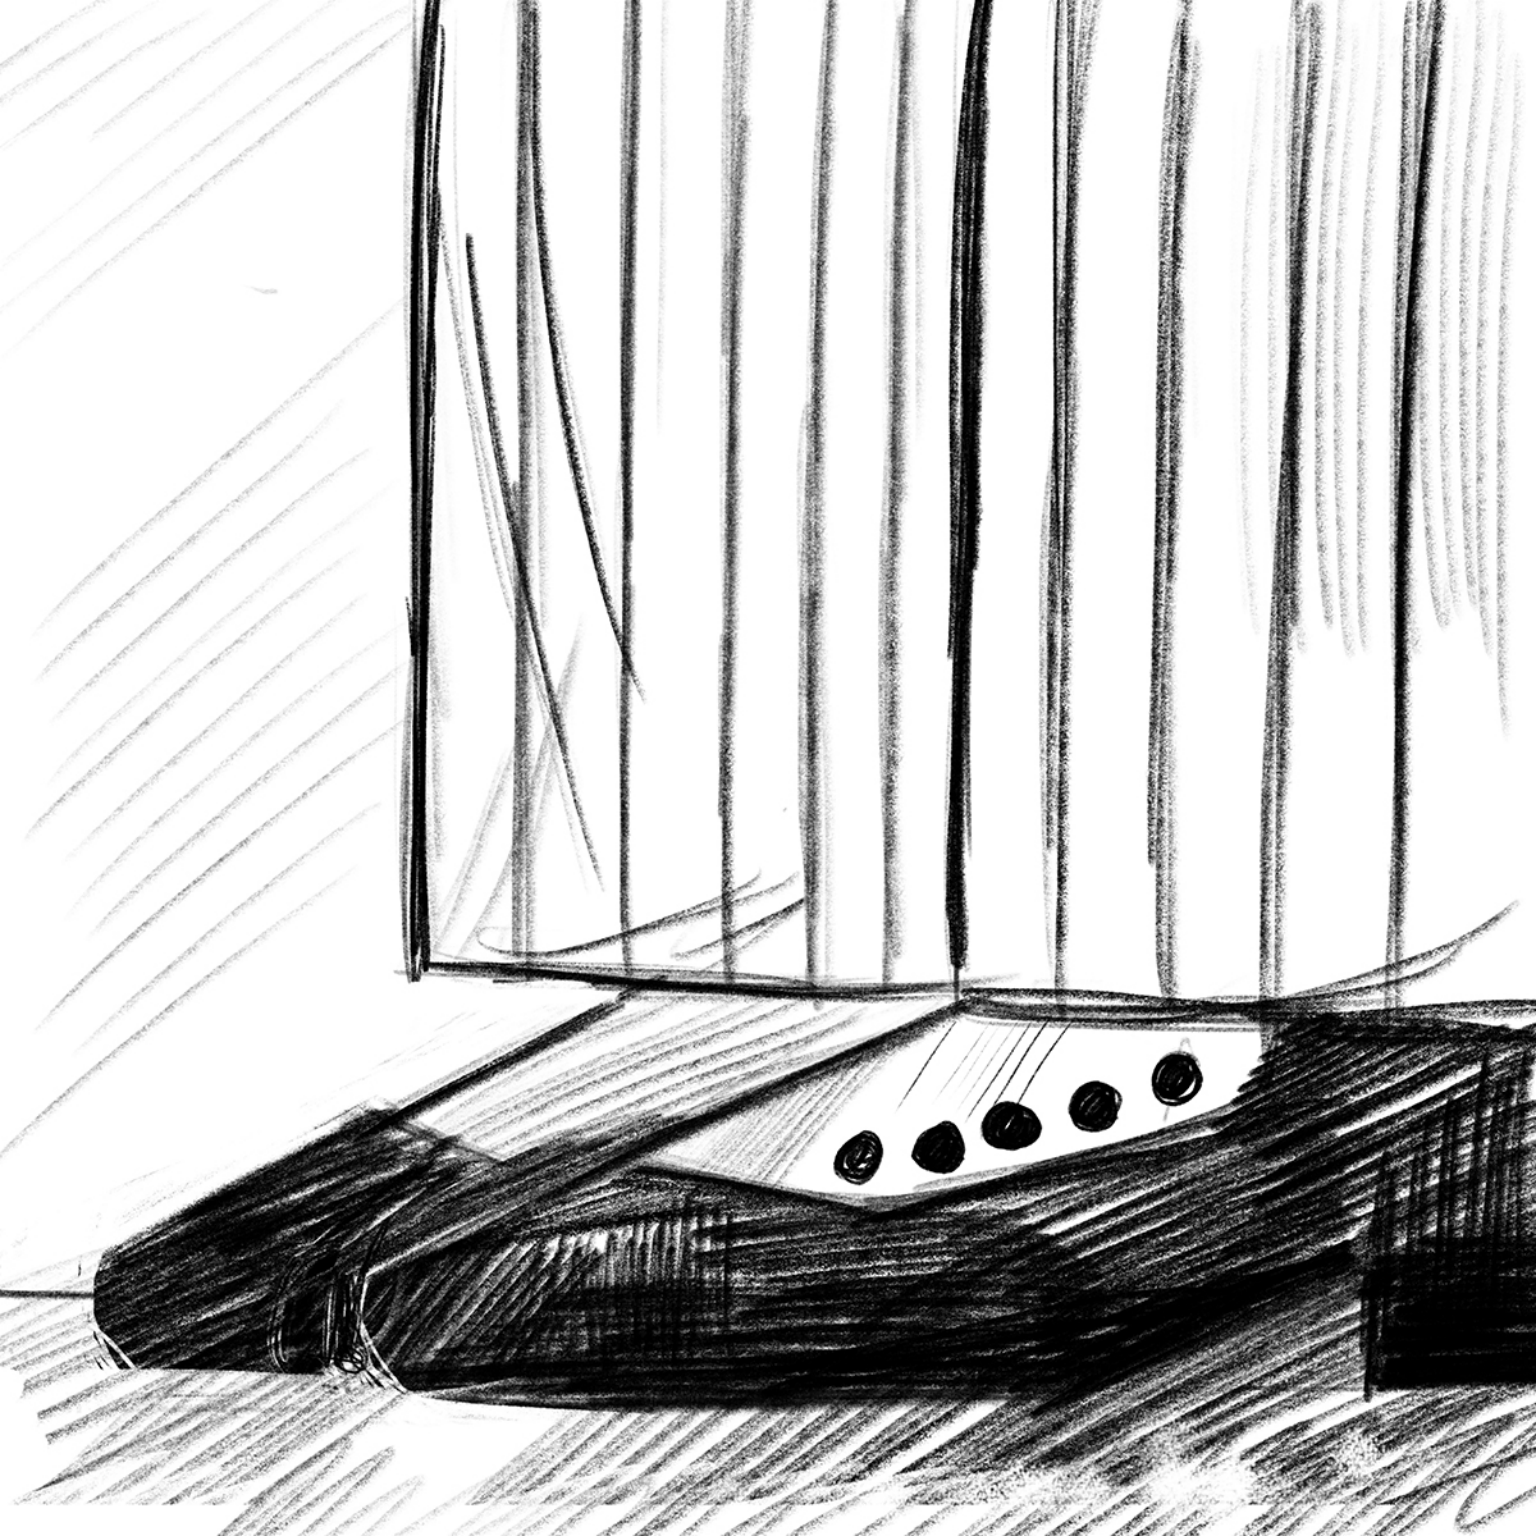

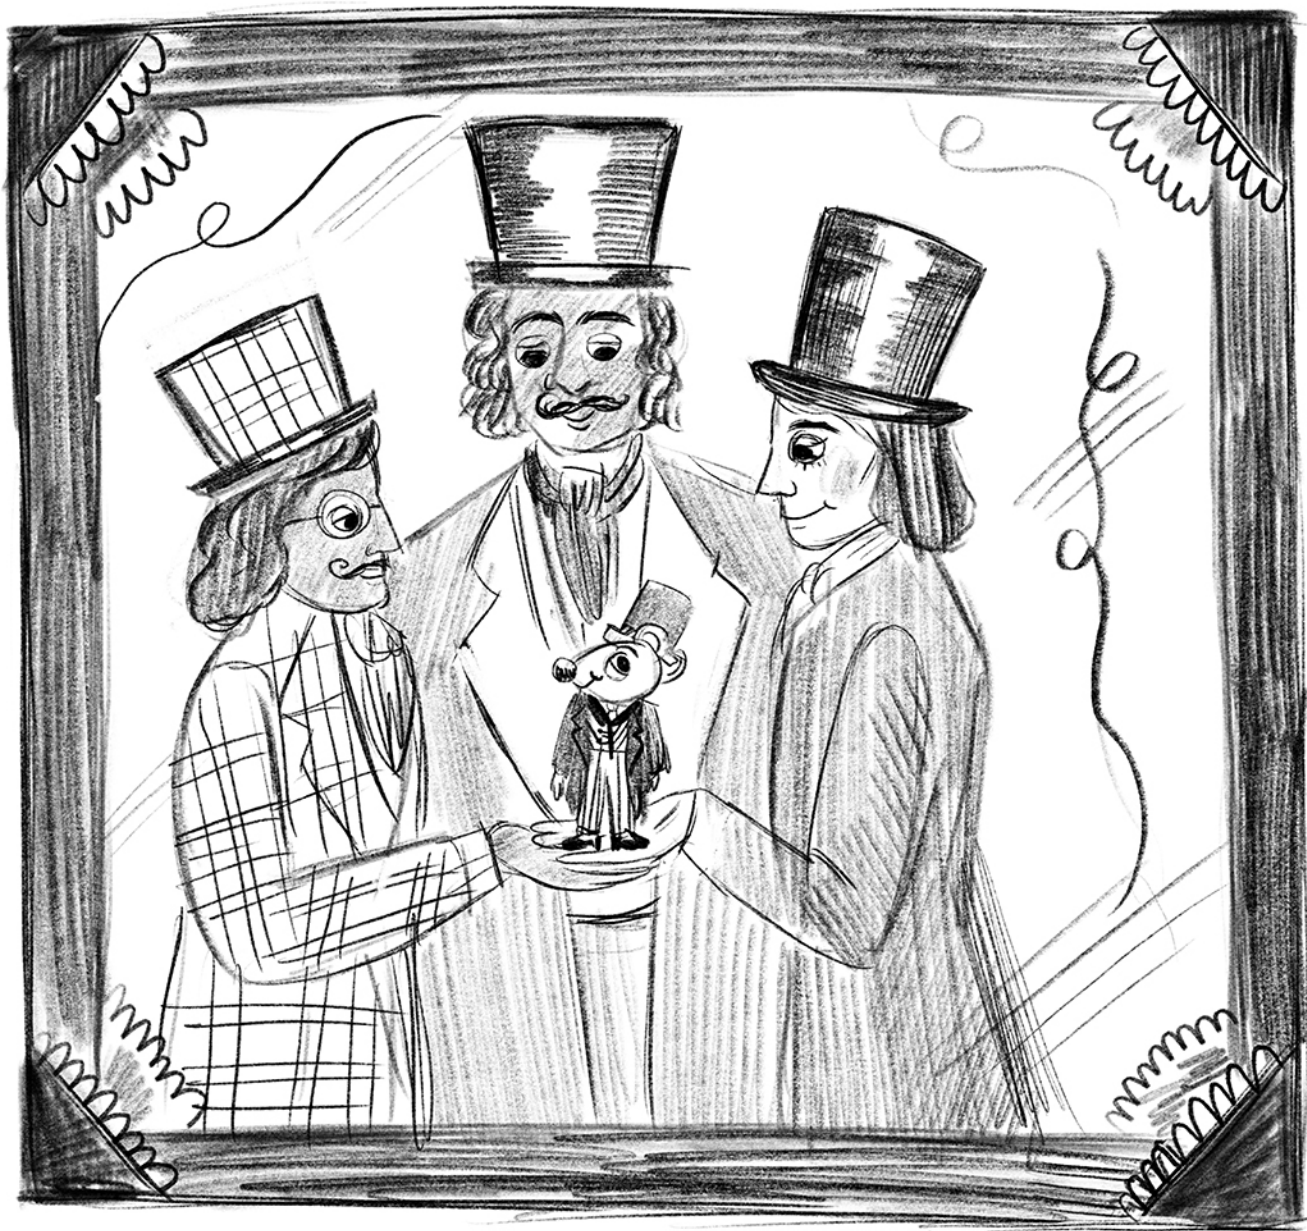

Mr. Mouse smelled cheese coming from outside his mouse door...
he went to look for it.

Mr. Mouse was so thrilled to find a new fancy tuxedo outfit and a delicious piece of cheese!

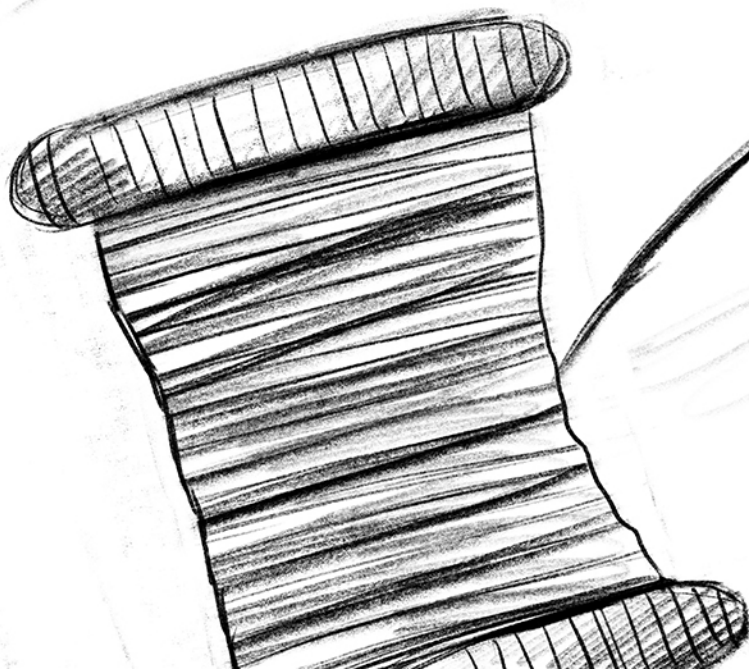

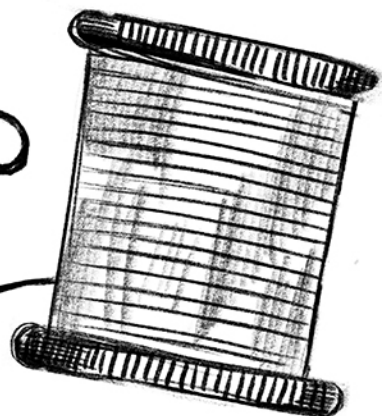

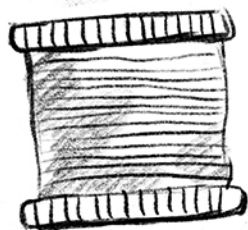

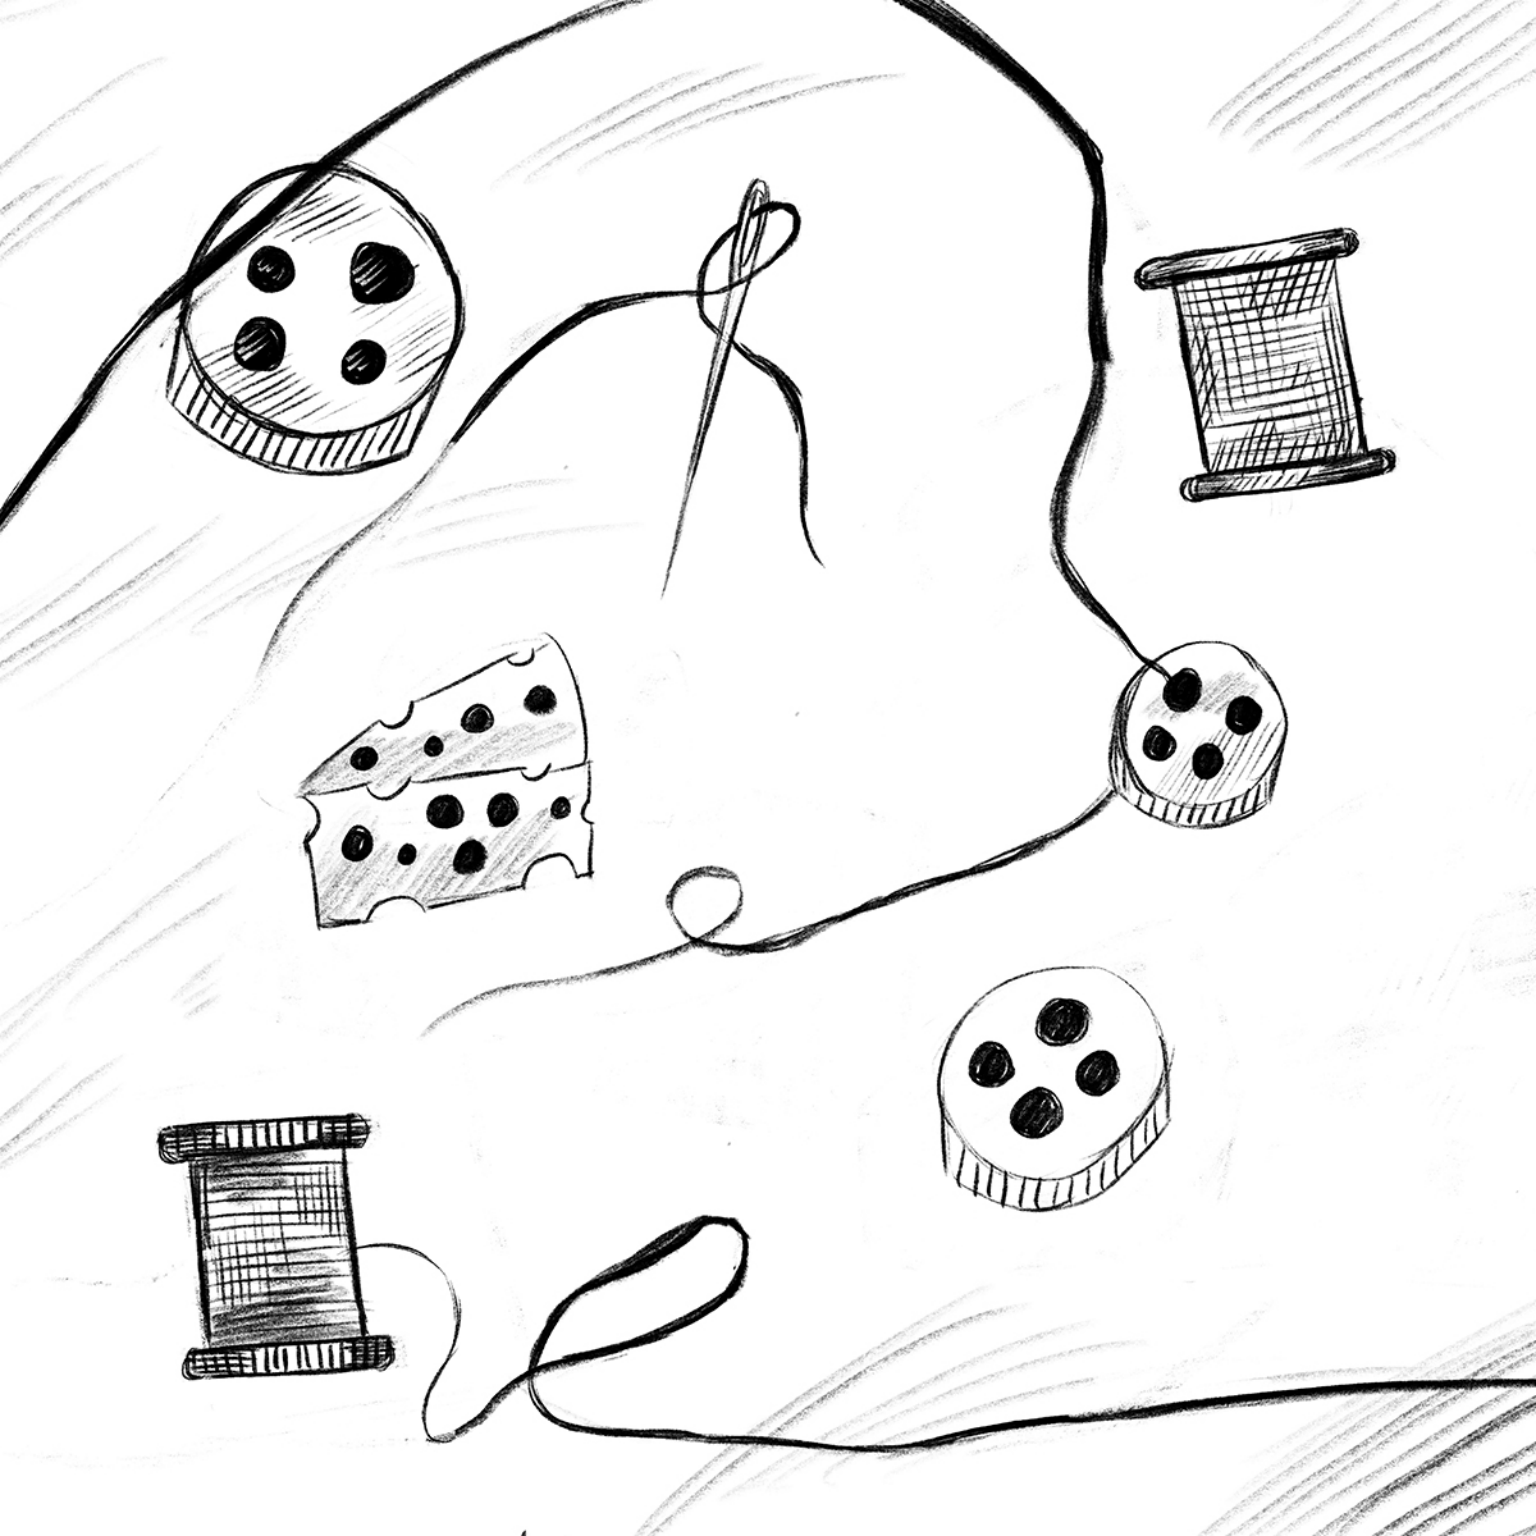

The neighbors agreed to take care of Mr. Mouse, and they were all so happy.

The End!

Mr. Mouse is a Victorian era story about a Mouse who wants to express himself with fancy clothing.
But when his mouse instincts get in the way,
things get out of hand.
